Money Kings Confer on Crisis

FORCED MAN TO STEAL HER.
Debe Kadri, South End girl, 14, who says that by threats of suicide she compelled her husband to elope with her.

KIDNAPER SHARHOOD GUILTY; 'I WANTED TO GO,' SAYS GIRL

Abraham Sharhood was today found guilty by a Superior Court jury of abducting Debe Kadri, a pretty South End girl, after the girl herself on the stand had declared she induced Sharhood to take her away and marry her by threatening to commit suicide if he refused.

She told of putting on long skirts and doing up her hair in order to obtain a license to be married in New York.

The girl disappeared from the home of her grandmother. The police searched for her for days. She was found in New York with Sharhood, to whom she had been married.

The man has protested from the first that the girl persuaded him that he must run away with her. On the stand to-day the girl said:

"I wanted Sharhood to take me away. I begged him.

"He finally took me to New York. I am fourteen years old. I told the marriage clerk I was nineteen.

"I put on long skirts and put up my hair. He believed me. We were married."

Assistant District Attorney Webber, who conducted the proceedings today for the government, tried to bring out in evidence that a ransom of $1,000 was demanded of the parents of the girl, but it was ruled out by Judge Quinn.

The grandmother of the girl testified that she had gone to a store to make some purchases and on her return the girl had gone.

The schoolgirl-wife made an attractive appearance on the stand. She was clad in an ankle length brown silk colored dress. Her hair was done up high. She appeared to be the most disinterested person in the case.

New Haven Board Studies Criticisms

NEW YORK, July 17.—The full board of directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad assembled in New York today, to consider the recent strictures on its financial management by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The company's lawyers have for several days been going over the commission's recommendations, among them the suggestion that the company divorce itself from its trolley lines.

The meeting was set for 1 p. m., and it was said that possibly a statement would be issued at its close.

Smiling "Jim the Penman" in Cell

"I Should Worry" Forger Starts Four-Year Sentence.

Claude Wayman, "Jim the Penman," brought sunshine into Charlestown prison today when he began his sentence of from four to five years at that institution for passing two forged checks for $250 each.

"Smiling Claude," the Merry Forger, who took his sentence with a remark of "I should worry," and "What's the use of being a grouch?" was not at all upset at the problem of four years behind the walls.

Wayman is probably the happiest little prisoner who ever entered Charlestown. Judge Quinn, who gave him the sentence, hardly believed his senses when he saw the young man smiling.

"Wayman," he said, "you do not appear to realize the gravity of your offence or your present situation." Whereupon Wayman made the remark anent the "grouch."

Countess Cowley Granted Divorce

LONDON, July 17.—Countess Cowley, who has figured conspicuously in the divorce courts, was granted a divorce today from Earl Cowley. The suit was undefended. Last January Earl Cowley was correspondent in the divorce suit of Major Buxton against his wife. Mrs. Buxton is the correspondent in the suit brought by Countess Cowley.

British Navy to Use Oil as an Auxiliary

LONDON, July 17.—First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill announced in the House of Commons this afternoon that coal will be used in the imperial navy this year, although oil will be burned as auxiliary fuel. The admiralty office has opened negotiations with the Mexican Eagle Company for a long-term contract for the supply of oil.

Fireworks Spark Starts $4,000 Blaze

NEW BEDFORD, July 17.—The pavilion and candy store at Hazelwood Park, in the South End, were destroyed by fire early today with a loss of $4,000. The fire is supposed to have started from sparks from a big fireworks display last night, when ten thousand people celebrated Mt. Carmel Day.

British Aviator Hewitson Killed

SALISBURY, England, July 17.—Major Hewitson, an English army aviator, was killed today while making a test flight over the military aerodrome on Salisbury Plain.

NEW SOX ROW AT DETROIT

President Johnson of American League Demands Stahl Facts of McAleer.

M'ALEER S NOW AROUSED

DETROIT, July 17.—"I'll run my team. That's all I have to say about Ban Johnson's coming here. But that goes. I'll run my team myself."

President James R. McLeer of the Red Sox, in this emphatic outburst, replied this afternoon to the criticism of Jake Stahl's release made public last night by President Ban Johnson of the American League.

"You'll have something more to say after you see Johnson," a Boston AMERICAN reporter suggested.

"Yes, you bet I'll have something more to say," he replied quickly and with emphasis. "Even if I don't see Johnson I'll have something more to say that will be worth while."

A Lively Row Is On.

Johnson arrived in Detroit this morning with the obvious intention of taking up the Jake Stahl quarrel with McAleer. He found that the Sox president was registered at the hotel where Johnson usually stops when in Detroit. Johnson went to another hotel.

Before meeting McAleer, however, Johnson retracted part of the statement he made in New York last night. It was that part in which he said that if he had been in Chicago Stahl would not have been released.

The arrival of Johnson in Detroit, following his New York statement, apparently means a lively row in the American League, precipitated by the McAleer-Stahl controversy. Johnson came he awaited to find out the why and wherefore of Stahl's summary release.

Johnson Is Furious.

Johnson is furious at the sudden deposing of Stahl, as Jake was induced to return to the game last Fall largely through Johnson's personal urging.

McAleer is here ready to hold the fort against Johnson and the conference expected later in the day promised to be stormy.

In the meantime Bill Carrigan, who is managing the Red Sox, is in an unpleasant position. He refuses to talk to any extent for publication, but he did admit this afternoon:

"I have not signed a contract as manager of the Red Sox. I see that President McAleer says that I am to be the manager the rest of the year and next year if I make good. That is up to him. But I have only a player's contract as yet."

Carrigan Is Permanent Head.

McAleer does not like the rumors that some outsider is to manage the club, but they have been so persistent as to create the opinion here that Carrigan is to be used only until another manager be engaged. In reply to this McAleer said this afternoon:

"Carrigan is our manager and undoubtedly will be next year. No other man is being considered."

Today's game was postponed on account of wet grounds. A double-header will be played Saturday. Catcher Cady has been recalled from Boston.

Repair Liner Massachusetts.

The repairs on the Metropolitan liner Massachusetts, which struck a sunken dredge, have been completed. She will resume her trips between Boston and New York Friday.

Who's Next to Go? State Street Asks

Drop Pin at South Station and Railroad Officials Jump.

Five little vice-presidents
All in a row.
Somebody pushed three into the sea.
Who's the next to go?

Who's next? was the inquiry all along State street and among railroad men today in connection with the wholesale dropping, one by one, of big officers of the Boston & Maine. Mellen got out. Hobbs got out. Now "Tim" Byrnes apparently didn't step out—somebody rubbed his name off the list of officers and he ceased to be—that was all.

State Street heard today that divorcing of the B. & M. from its faithful friend, the New Haven, is to be followed by the hurried exit of Mellen from the presidency of the New England steamship lines and next will come the sale by the New Haven of its trolley lines, as advised by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Meanwhile, if you want to see some high-priced railroad men jump and look scared, drop a pin down at the South Station. For these be parlous times!

Five Autoists Fined in Somerville Court

Five motorists were fined by Judge Wentworth in the Somerville police court today. Charles E. Schmals, a Brookline hairdresser, and Malcolm B. Sevey of Malden, each paid $3 fine for not blowing their horns near crossings. F. Archibald Welch of Boston, George H. Spinney of Lynn and William P. Frost of Dorchester, accused of "cutting out" their mufflers, each paid a fine of $10.

Ice Driver Guilty of Short Weight

William A. Farrell, a driver for the Eagle Ice Company, was arraigned in the Quincy District court to-day on two charges of "short weighting" ice to customers. He pleaded nolo and was assessed the costs, amounting to $3 on each charge.

Think Body That of Boy Who Escaped

The body of a boy about fifteen was found afloat off Winthrop Beach today. It is supposed to be the body of one of the two boys who were drowned in attempting to escape from Rainsford Island a few days ago. Captain Howard Davenport of the government tug E. A. Bumpus picked up the body.

Say Lost Necklace Is Worth $750,000

LONDON, July 17.—The value of the pearl necklace which was stolen from a jewelry merchant here between Paris and London, the theft of which was reported to Scotland Yard, was today placed at $750,000 instead of $625,000.

MAY OUST CHIEF IN REVERE

Selectman White Charges Police Head Chainey Refused to Raid Club.

TO DEMAND RESIGNATION

Chairman Walter T. White of the Revere Board of Selectmen declared today that his raid of the Lynnway Club is the first of his one-man clean-up crusade of the town. He hinted that law-breaking resorts in the town had been allowed to exist as the result of graft paid to men elected to execute the law.

Chairman White says the Revere police refused to raid the club and so he went to the Metropolitan Park Police and they gave him the men. It has long been the talk in Revere that the liquor selling at the Point of Pines has gone on because of protection paid to some one "higher up" in Revere.

Undertaker White said he would request Acting Chief Claire P. Chaney to resign at the next meeting of the selectmen, and if he declines he will prefer charges against him. The White charges came on the heels of the Segee prosecution. He said:

I'm not placing the blame on anybody just yet. I don't accuse any member of the board of selectmen, but if my position against the Revere police department is not upheld, if my stand is opposed, the people will be the judges.

So some want to know why I went over the heads of our town police department and got the Metropolitan police to help, do they? The answer is easy. Six weeks ago I consulted Acting Chief Chaney. I told him I wanted to have the Lynnway Club raided. The Point of Pines is in Revere territory. Revere is a no-license town, but I had evidence that liquor was being sold there in the most open fashion.

Chief Chaney told me he was powerless to act. He said he didn't have any money. Then I got the Board of Selectmen to pass my order allowing him whatever appropriation in excess would be necessary to clean out such places. I find that $300 has been expended from the surplus appropriation, but nothing has been accomplished so far as closing dives is concerned.

PRESIDENT LIKELY TO BACK DOWN

May Recognize Huerta Rule in Mexico to Save the Monroe Doctrine.

ENVOY NOT TO RETURN

PARIS, July 17.—It was reported in diplomatic circles today that a meeting of representatives of the Powers and of financiers interested in Mexican securities had been held here yesterday to consider the Mexican situation and the attitude of the United States.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—That Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson, who sailed from Vera Cruz for Washington today, never will return to Mexico as the representative of the United States was stated authoritatively at the White House today.

While the administration is opposed to any action which might be taken as a recognition of the Huerta regime, it is believed that the sudden crisis in Mexican affairs will force Washington to accept Ambassador Wilson's resignation and to appoint his successor within a short time.

Confers with Bacon.

Formal recognition of the Huerta government would be required if the United States were to send an ambassador to Mexico as successor of Henry Lane Wilson. This was asserted by State Department officials today, who added that there is no way in which the United States can change its attitude toward Mexico at the present time without involving a formal and valid recognition of General Huerta. There is no middle ground on which the United States could stand so as to "save its face" in its present embarrassment and at the same time yield to the pressure now being placed upon it by certain European powers.

President Wilson understands the

JOHNSON SUPPORTS M'ALEER NOW.

DETROIT, July 17.—President Ban Johnson of the American League announced late this afternoon that he would not interfere in the Red Sox controversy. He said that he was interested to know the whole story of Jake Stahl's release, but added:

"I'm taking it for granted that McAleer will conduct it right."

Johnson then announced that he would leave for Boston Mass., tomorrow.

ARLINGTON ICE MAN FINED FOR SHORT WEIGHING.

Ralph Tasker, an employe of the Arlington & Belmont Ice Company, was fined $10 by Judge Almy in the Cambridge District Court today for selling short weight ice. The complaint was made by Lorenzo Marston, deputy sealer of weights and measures.

FAULTY SPEECH MAY IDENTIFY HOTEL SUICIDE

An impediment of speech not previously mentioned may help identify the Bellevue Hotel suicide.

The doorman at the hotel said today: "She was what is known as 'tongue-tied.' At any rate the defect, with her foreign accent, made it extremely difficult to tell what she was saying. I told the boys the day she arrived that she was mentally unbalanced."

The hotel manager said:

"Although she appeared in moderate circumstances she had plenty of money to meet her expenses. She paid for everything as she got it and had money left."

The police are now of the opinion that the young woman went to the hotel planning suicide.

Beside the impediment of speech, a slight scar extending through the left eyebrow, gold filling in her lower teeth and an embroidered "R" on one of her handkerchiefs are the only clews to date.

Hotel employes and the attendant at the North Grove street morgue today stated with positiveness that a picture of Miss Emily McGuy, the missing East Providence girl, in no way resembled the young woman suicide.

EMILY M'GUY, the missing East Providence girl, whose picture Bellevue Hotel attendants deny is that of the mysterious suicide.

EXPECT WILSON TO RECOGNIZE HUERTA'S RULE

gravity of the present situation. He conferred with Senator Bacon, chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs, early today concerning the Mexican question, and the Georgia Senator pointed out that the opposition of the Wilson administration to the Huerta government, if continued, would be fraught with an immense amount of danger to the Monroe Doctrine, the principles of which are considered to be in more peril now than at any time since the Venezuelan boundary dispute during Cleveland's administration.

Being informed on all sides that a recognition of President Huerta by the United States would end the present trouble south of the Rio Grande, and prevent the necessity for active intervention—the only other alternative now apparent—it is considered likely that the President will consider it wiser to retreat from his announced Latin-American policy and recognize the present Mexican government.

Before taking any decisive steps, however, the President will await the arrival of Ambassador Wilson and his future course of action will be based largely on the advice of the ambassador, who is considered to be more closely in touch with the situation than any other employe of the government. Should the United States desire to intervene it has troops and ships ready for instant action, but it is believed here that the President will choose to back down from his policy of "no recognition of any but properly elected constitutional governments" rather than plunge the United States into a war.

Great Britain was revealed today as having served formal notice on the State Department that there "must be peace in Mexico."

The demand carries with it the formal warning that the United States must bring about this peace, or Great Britain, acting jointly with the nations represented in Mexico City, will ignore the Monroe doctrine and assume control of the situation.

DENY DEPARTURE OF WILSON MEANS U. S. INTERVENTION

MEXICO CITY, July 17.—The following official statement was issued by the U. S. Embassy here today relative to the trip of U. S. Ambassador Wilson, who was called to Washington by President Wilson:

The Ambassador's trip to Washington is solely for the purpose of placing before the administration exact information in a thorough way relative to the existing situation in Mexico. It has this purpose and no other construction should be placed on his departure other than the real one stated by the Ambassador.

In spite of this assurance that the trip of Mr. Wilson does not mean intervention by the United States a big sensation was caused here by his departure.

Rev. John F. Walsh Dies in Hospital

Rev. John F. Walsh, professor at St. John's Seminary, Brighton, and one of the most widely known young clergymen in the archdiocese of Boston, died early today at the Carney Hospital, South Boston, of blood poisoning after four attacks. He was so thoroughly conversant with medicine and surgery that he was fully aware of the seriousness of his condition and in the last was conscious that death was near. His courage was strong to the end.

Father Walsh had received signal honor from Cardinal O'Connell, who appointed him defender of the marriage bond in the Boston archdiocese. Father Walsh was thirty-four and was the son of John F. Walsh, a Boston patrolman.

Foss Tells Post He Cannot Raise Wages

Louis F. Post, assistant secretary of the Department of Labor, held a three-hour conference with Governor Foss, today, looking toward a settlement of the strike at the Foss works in Hyde Park. The conference was fruitless. It is understood the Governor gave Mr. Post to understand that he positively could not grant the strikers' demands and stay in business.

Mr. Post held a conference with representatives of the employes at the Quincy House this afternoon.

Clear Dwyer in Auto Death Case

William H. Dwyer, twenty-eight, of No. 105 Hammond street, Roxbury, appeared before Judge Parmenter of the Municipal Court today charged with manslaughter in causing the death of Frank Struk, twenty-two, of No. 10 Ward street, Roxbury, by running over him with an automobile in Haymarket square a week ago. He was found not guilty and discharged. A dozen witnesses were called by the government and all of them testified that the car was going at a moderate rate of speed, and the horn was sounded just before the accident.

Congressmen Go Down in Submarine

NEWPORT, July 17.—This was a strenuous day for the members of the Naval Committee of the House of Representatives who came here to inspect the Naval Training Station. After looking over the station the members made a descent in three submarines. They they went on board the battleship Wyoming and visited Rear Admiral Charles Badger. Afterwards they inspected Narragansett Bay from the land side. Tonight Congressman Peter Gerry will give a clambake for the Congressmen.

MAYOR BACK, SAFE, FROM HIS CAPITAL TRIP

Mayor Fitzgerald returned to Boston from Washington today, and not only quieted rumors about to School street that he was seriously injured or dead, but beat the Federal Express into the South station by three hours.

Last night City Hall circles were stirred by a report that the Mayor had been in a wreck in a motor car accident in Washington. As a matter of fact the Mayor was then aboard the Federal Express, studying the time tables to see how he could outrace the express into Boston.

When the Mayor showed up on School street at his office, friends greeted him with:

"Why, we feared you were in a morgue or a hospital."

"Well, you know better now, don't you?"

The Mayor told with great glee of how he had left the Federal Express at Philadelphia, boarded a train for New York and taken the midnight limited over to Boston, reaching here at 6.55 a. m., three hours before the federal express.

Speaking of the visit of himself with the Massachusetts delegation to the White House, the Mayor said he thought it would be at least a week or ten days before President Wilson makes an appointment to the collectorship of the port of Boston.

He said he believed the selection would be from among Charles S. Hamlin, John T. Burnett and William Taylor.

"The entire delegation was in entire harmony," said the Mayor.

Referring to the race to clip hours off the running time between Boston and Washington, the Mayor said special service would be possible if State Street should interest itself in financing a tunnel between the Pennsylvania and Grand Central Stations in New York, to obviate the long detour now necessary for the Federal Express by way of Poughkeepsie.

The Mayor said the Naval Affairs Committee will be in Boston on Saturday to inspect the Charlestown Navy Yard. The Mayor will entertain the committee.

Today Mayor Fitzgerald learned that there were 1,500 tons of coal in Boston Harbor selling at seventy cents per ton less than the local market rate. He said he would exert every effort to get cheap coal for the city for the departments.

Destroyer Fanning Aleak, Makes Port

After Compartment Fills While Vessel Is Escorting Brazilian.

NEW YORK, July 17.—The U. S. torpedo destroyer Fanning, one of the biggest in the American navy, sprang aleak off Fire Island early today and raced at top speed for fifty miles into New York harbor for help. She arrived at Brooklyn Navy yard at 6.45 o'clock with her after compartment filled with water.

At the Navy Yard it was said that the Fanning was not in danger of sinking at any time.

The Fanning was one of three destroyers which went with the battleships Arkansas and Delaware as escorts to the Brazilian battleship Minas Geraes, aboard which Dr. Lauro Muller, Brazilian minister of foreign affairs sailed for Rio de Janeiro yesterday.

Hundreds in Peril as Liner Is Rammed

CHICAGO, July 17.—The lives of hundreds of passengers on the Goodrich steamship Iowa were endangered at 8 a. m. today, when the big Lake liner was rammed by her sister ship Sachoyan, at the mouth of the Chicago river. The Iowa was stove in from her rail to fire feet below the waterline. The Sheboygan also wrecked her bow, and when she backed away, tons of water rushed into the opening in the Iowa's side. Half a dozen tugs lying in the river rushed to the aid of the disabled ships and all the passengers were taken off.

'BRYAN SHOULD LIVE ON SALARY OR ELSE QUIT'

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The consensus of opinion among public and private persons in the national capital is that if Secretary Bryan cannot live on his salary of $12,000 a year he ought to resign and continue his lecture tours as a private individual.

Mr. Bryan has given evidence of the fact that the country-wide criticism had got under his skin. That he was irritated and impatient and realized the "bad break" he has made, was apparent to his subordinates throughout the day. Somewhat petulantly he declared that the press of the country might have assumed that "my lecture engagements are subject to cancellation."

Publicly, Mr. Bryan announced to the country that he could not live on a salary about which his fellow cabinet members have not complained, and in a second statement, given out authoritatively, complained that criticism was groundless.

The AMERICAN endeavored to obtain from Mr. Bryan more in detail the reasons that actuated him to arrange to leave his post of duty at a time when very grave matters pertaining to our relations with foreign powers were pending. He declined to answer certain questions.

Won't Answer Questions.

Mr. Bryan was asked these questions by the AMERICAN:

If you feel your duty is to your private pocketbook rather than to the 'great common people' to whom you have preached, simplicity for the last seventeen years, why do you not resign and devote your entire time to the lecture platform and literary pursuits?

If you believe the people have called you to the great office you can fill so ably, do you not believe that it is your duty as an American and a patriot to sacrifice your personal interests for the interests of your country? The more so from the fact that you admit you have saved about $200,000, which is considerably more than a competence when invested shrewdly?

You say that you entered one campaign from the Chautauqua platform. Is it not a fact that you look upon the present and future engagements as the best opportunity to get in direct touch with the people, who, you contend, will elect the next President by direct vote?

Bryan Leaves to Lecture.

No answer was returned. Later he left Washington to keep an engagement to lecture.

Senator Brister, author of the resolution calling upon the President for information as to what salary ought to be paid to enable Mr. Bryan to stay in Washington and attend to his public duties, today came back with a rejoinder to Mr. Bryan's explanation of last night.

"Secretary Bryan's second statement has astonished me even more than his first one," said Mr. Brister. "That the present Secretary of State should have such a sordid view of the government service is amazing."

Many Senators, while not permitting themselves to be quoted, agreed that Mr. Bryan had made a grave mistake. Mr. Townsend of Michigan holds that the Secretary is doing that which is denied to every subordinate employe of the government and denounced it as reprehensible.

Among those who talked was Senator Weeks of Massachusetts, who said: "A Cabinet member can live on $12,000 a year, if he does not have large family expenses, and he can live comfortably and respectably."

"TANGO GOWN" HERE, HAS BAGGY TROUSERS

Girl in the Tango gown, transparent costume hailed as successor of the "slit skirt."

The tango gown has arrived. As shown yesterday on a charming blond American model for whom it was designed in Paris, it is certain to set the town agog when it makes its first public appearance.

The daring innovation, which has been described from most independent through Paris cables, was shown to a representative of the AMERICAN by a Boston importer.

The tango gown means that instead of a slit skirt a pair of small Turkish trousers, reaching to the ankles and held by a band of crystal beads, has been adopted for ultra fashionable dancing frocks. Over these attenuated trousers there is a drapery of crepe of the same shade, entirely open, being held by a few stitches only, as far as the hip line. The figure is plainly visible above the knees. The new gown is called the tango trousers dress.

"The blouses and bodices are made loose and have the appearance of falling off," said the importer. "The upper part of the figure is not outlined in the least. Women don't care a fig how large their waists are, but needs are soon for gowns that make ankle and calf visible. We may object, but it is the fashion, and Americans will have to get used to it."

A Woman Jury? "No!" Says Woman

Dressmaker Says Mere Man Is "Best Judge of Veracity."

CHICAGO, July 17.—A woman here refused to consent to a jury of twelve women to try her case in court.

Mrs. Elizabeth Schank, a dressmaker, defendant in a suit over a $30 dress made for Mrs. R. Davenport, declared men, "who are the best judges of veracity," shall hear her case.

"What! A woman jury?" exclaimed Mrs. Schank, after talking with her lawyer. "Not on your life!"

Mrs. Davenport proposed the woman jury, saying "women know more about style than men."

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

Birthday Surprise for Mrs. W. R. Hearst

Parents She Thought in East Greet Her at Pleasanton, Cal.

PLEASANTON, Cal., July 17.—Guests at a house party on the hacienda of Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst congratulated their hostess today on the success of a birthday affair she gave in honor of Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, her daughter-in-law.

A specially prepared dance floor was laid over the driveway around the ancient well brought from Verona, Italy, many years ago, and which graces the front place its name, the Hacienda del Pozo de Verona. Preceding the dance, the birthday dinner was held in the great dining hall. Forty guests sat down to a table of amazing beauty. The hothouses and gardens of the hacienda and huge silver pieces from all parts of the earth made an unusual effect. A miniature birthday cake enclosing a charming dinner favor was before each banquetter.

A pleasant surprise for Mrs. Hearst was effectively arranged. When she entered the dining room, she was confronted by her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Wilson, and her sister, Mrs. A. W. Torrey, whom she believed to be in New York.

See Muscles, Almost, In London Gowns

LONDON, July 17.—America is not alone on the women's dress controversy. The filmy sheath transparency now worn, through which every movement of the legs and almost of the muscles can be seen, and the slashings and liftings of the skirt, displaying bother limbs encased in diaphanous silk, not covered by anything but court shoes, has raised the question: "Has the Eve-like craze in modern fashions gone too far?"

One modiste expressed the opinion that daring costumes did not appeal to the great majority of Englishwomen. "Even Englishwomen who tolerate the 'pneumonia blouse,'" he said, "draw the line at the rheumatic skirt. The leaving off process cannot go much further."

Says 90 Per Cent. Have Tuberculosis

The average layman is better educated as to the danger and the prevention of tuberculosis than many doctors, according to the statement before the Legislative Tuberculosis Investigating Committee today of Dr. John B. Hawes, secretary of the board of trustees of the Hospital for Consumptives. He said: "Out of all the people, fully 90 per cent. have tuberculosis, and many of them never know it. This is because many doctors haven't the knowledge to diagnose a case correctly."

Pittsburgh Lid off on the Slit Skirt

PITTSBURGH, July 17.—So far as Public Safety Director Dudley is concerned, Pittsburgh women can wear "side slit" skirts or "slit knee" skirts and wear a flimsy gown without petticoat under it. When asked if he would follow the edicts in adjoining boroughs and ban certain garments he said:

"No women will be arrested for wearing the most fashionable gowns. I think women are dressing all right. Women will wear what they like no matter what the ministers and their neighbors think."

London Women Smoking Cigars

LONDON, July 17.—Copying the customs of certain parts of the continent society women here are taking to cigar smoking. When the fashionable woman soothes her nerves now she does not do it with cigarettes, but with a strong black cigar. Every evening women are seen with cigars in their mouths as they drive along the fashionable boulevards in the West End.

Rescue Couple from South Boston Fire

Dazed and overcome by smoke, Michael J. Sullivan and wife were rescued today from a fire in their home at No. 73 Dresser street, South Boston, by Sergeant Livingstone and Patrolman Donahue of the Broadway station. Both Sullivan and his wife were then arrested on the charge of drunkenness. Sullivan is said to have been smoking a cigarette in bed. The building was slightly damaged.

MESSENGER OF CLARK BRIBED, MULHALL SAYS

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Colonel Martin M. Mulhall testified before the senate lobby investigating committee today that he had paid money to Henry Neal, Speaker Clark's negro messenger, for "small favors such as getting people in and out of the speaker's office." Neal has held the position as messenger at the speaker's office for thirty years.

An interchange of telegrams took place in April, 1908, between Representative Henry T. Rannon of Portsmouth, O., and Colonel Mulhall, regarding aid which Mulhall was to give Rannon in his campaign for renomination.

"I expected to have a conference with Rannon regarding a strike in Portsmouth," said Mulhall.

Rannon arranged to meet Mulhall at Portsmouth, O. On April 28, 1908, the late Vice-President Sherman wrote Mulhall telling Mulhall that it was impossible to get the Littlefield compulsory pilotage bill through the House. Sherman was provoked at the tariff agitation of the National Association and said it might lead to the election of a Democratic President. Sherman also was angry at the newspaper fight against Speaker Cannon, then a candidate for the nomination for President.

At that time Representative James A. Watson of Indiana, according to a letter written by Mulhall, "had a great notion to take the floor before Congress adjourned and expose the whole dirty piece of trickery from start to finish," referring to a statement that the White House, meaning President Roosevelt, was responsible for the newspaper campaign against Cannon.

"Watson states that the President is moving heaven and earth to nominate Taft," wrote Mulhall, "that he is willing to sacrifice the Sherman law and every other law to please the trusts and to please Wall Street, so that he can get their support for his candidate at Chicago."

"I learned," wrote Mulhall, "while at Senator Foraker's home that the opposition to the President (Roosevelt) intends to let no legislation through which he wishes at this session of Congress and intends to fight the Taft forces to a finish. They were perfectly confident of having a majority of the national committee with them who would seat all the contesting delegations that would come to Chicago against Taft."

On May 7, 1908, Mulhall wrote:

"Watson has made a confession to me and it is this: All this scare about injunction bills and an amendment to the Sherman law and such legislation was all gotten up by him and the Speaker for the purpose of defeating the President with letters and to stop this dickering."

Has Pledged Himself to Work for Suffrage Cause.

LONDON, July 17.—Eugene J. Boissevain, husband of Inez Milholland, the beautiful American suffragette, compiled to his friends today that he had pledged himself to work for the "cause."

"My wife has convinced me that things will not be right until women are on an equal footing with men in every respect," said he. "She is very enthusiastic about votes and I am getting that way myself. I believe that the Englishwomen are justified in using violence. Mrs. Pankhurst is the finest man in England."

Fined for Attack Upon Policeman

Walter Feeney was fined $20 in the South Boston Court today on charges of playing "craps" last Sunday at the corner of B and West Fifth street, and of attacking Officer McCormick, who arrested him. He appealed and was held in $400.

Pickwick Ale on tap

The Marquis of Granby in Mrs. Weller's time was quite a model of a roadside public house of the better class.

The open shutters bore a variety of golden inscriptions, eulogistic of good beds and bitter hop ale.

It was here that Mr. Stiggins used to sit, always with a mug of bitter hop ale before him, and smile upon Mrs. Weller.

No one then could resist the charm of such an ale.

No one today can resist the charm of the same bitter hop flavor found in Pickwick Ale.

Go back to those days when one found such satisfaction in friendly meetings at these Inns.

The road is easy to find—look today for the sign "Pickwick Ale on tap."

Step in, ask for a glass, and you will realize in a measure why those Ale Inns were so popular in the thirties.

REDFIELD PLANT DRIVEN TO CANADA, FOSS SHOWS

175 Companies Compelled to Move Over the Line, Declares the Governor.

Governor Eugene N. Foss today gave a partial list of the great industrial companies driven by American tariff conditions to establish plants in Canada. One of these concerns is the American Blower Company, of which Secretary of Commerce Redfield was vice-president.

With a reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and Canada all these companies could have manufactured every dollar's worth of their products with American labor on American soil.

Governor Foss said:

"My statement of Monday last, to the effect that from three to five hundred million of capital had gone from the United States into the financing of manufacturing plants in Canada, has created considerable surprise. The fact is that the movement of American manufacturing and American money into Canada has been going on so quietly that it has not attracted much public attention. But when some concern of prominence moves into Canada the news is broadcasted.

"Thus, for example, it is well known that the General Electric Company has a very extensive plant in Canada; also the Westinghouse Electric Company, the Oliver Chilled Plow Company, the International Harvester Company, the American Locomotive Company, the American Blower Company, the Buffalo Forge Company, the Plymouth Cordage Works; and in fact nearly all the leading concerns of every industry have been compelled to establish branches in Canada.

Tells of 175 Companies.

"To complete the list would be impossible, for in many instances the establishment of these factories is not announced and is not made a matter of official record.

"I find, however, that up to January 1, 1913, approximately 175 American companies had established themselves in Canada.

"The recorded amounts of capital invested in these enterprises and in the purchase of land, distributing houses, packing plants and also in the purchase of holdings of stock in Canadian corporations, reached a total of $270,000,000. This, of course, does not even approximately express the total of American money which has gone into Canada.

"In many instances the plants which our manufacturers are establishing in Canada are directly owned and financed by the parent concerns in this country and, in some instances, even the payroll is met by the weekly shipment of funds from the American parent concern to its branch in Canada.

"I believe it is a conservative statement to say that, up to date, at least five hundred millions of American money has been poured into Canada in the building up of American properties across the border.

"I see also that there appears to be a wide misunderstanding of the present status of our reciprocity program with respect to Canada. Some editors are commenting upon the failure of our Republican program, and attributing the responsibility for this failure not to our own government, but to Canada.

Still Paying Penalty.

"The fact, however, is well vouched for by Canadian authorities that the people of Canada are distinctly favorable to American reciprocity per se, but the program which was put up to them by the Taft administration was most unfortunately handicapped by the intrusion of the idea of annexation.

"Moreover, our own national government had for so many years refused to countenance any reasonable reciprocity with Canada that our neighbors across the border were naturally suspicious, so when the Taft administration, instead of relegating to the Canadian government a direct reciprocity program, merely offered to the Canadians an absolute free gift of a portion of the American paper market; the Canadians were, of course, gratified, but were under no obligations to reciprocate.

"We are still paying the penalty for this blunder of the Taft administration.

"In this case we opened our markets to Canadian products on an absolutely free trade basis. The result has been the embarrassment of many of our local industries in this field without any corresponding benefit in a reduction in the price of either pulp or paper.

"Now the Underwood bill proposes to make a like blunder with reference to wool and sugar.

"Under the previous tariff bills the cane and beet sugar industries of the country have been fostered and built up, millions of capital have been invested and thousands of people are employed. If it is now proposed to place sugar on the free list within three years widely, according to the best authorities, would result in practically wiping out the beet and cane sugar industry, and it is a question to what extent the cost of sugar to the consumer would be reduced.

"Hurt Go to Canda.

"Further than this, the removal from the duty on sugar brings the government fifty millions of dollars. Again, by placing wool on the free list we are not only striking a blow at the wool growers of the Northwest and Middle States, but we are opening up our markets for Australia and Argentina, without securing, as Mr. Blaine put it, 'the sale of a single additional barrel of pork or bag of flour for our producers.'

"In my judgment the country is not ready for such a drastic program, and a reduction in these tariff duties can better be effected through reciprocal trade agreements. In recognition of which our best customers will be secured and a broader market for the products of our own industries.

"In answer to your question as to how long this movement of American capital toward Canada is likely to continue, I believe that it will greatly increase from year to year under the present fiscal systems of both countries.

"Undoubtedly the development of Canada in the next twenty-five years will be relatively greater than in the United States. This fact impels enterprising concerns to fortify themselves by locating within Canadian borders.

Points to Redfield.

"So far as my own business is concerned, our folks have for years been urging me to move it to Canada, saying that we were losing business; but I said 'No, that isn't the way.' So I went into politics. That was ten years ago. I ran for Congress as a Republican on a reciprocity platform and was defeated. Two years later I had the same experience.

"Then I was candidate for delegate to the convention which nominated Roosevelt, and again I was beaten. After that I joined the Democratic party, with the results that are matters of public knowledge.

"Our principal competitor, the American Blower Company, of which Secretary Redfield has been until recently president, built a great plant in Windsor, Ont., two years ago.

"Mr. Redfield toured the world in the interests of his company, and on that tour acquired the information which has given him reputation as a tariff expert."

Governor Foss says that he has received many letters and telegrams from men of both parties who read his statement in Monday's AMERICAN, warmly applauding his position and commending him for taking it publicly.

Half Billion of American Capital Driven Into Canada in Single Year

The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce at Washington gives the following remarkable statistics showing how American capital has been driven to Canada by an unwise reciprocity policy:

United States capital invested in Canada 1905-09, $279,175,000.

United States capital invested in Canada 1911, $417,143,221.

United States capital invested in Canada 1913, $500,000,000.

Full statistics were made by the British Board of Trade at Toronto in May, 1911, and these detailed estimates of American investments were then given out:

Two hundred and nine companies, with an average capital of $600,000, $125,400,000.

Investments in British Columbia mills and timber, $65,000,000.

Investments in British Columbia mines, $60,000,000.

Land deals in prairie provinces, $25,000,000.

Investments in lumber and mines in the prairie provinces, packing plants, $6,000,000.

Investments in Canada of United States insurance companies, $43,292,221.

Miscellaneous industrial investments, $10,000,000.

Purchase of city and town property, $15,525,000.

JOHNNY EVERS AND HIS SCRAPPY CUBS ARE HERE TODAY

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

HUGH BEDIENT OUT TO BEAT TIGERS IN SECOND GAME

PILGRIMS AND CUBS MEET IN DOUBLE-HEADER

Johnny Evers and his Chicago Cubs, who are meeting at a very fast clip, arrived in town today and open up a five-game series with the Pilgrims at the South End Grounds this afternoon. A parlay day is on for the "fans," a double-header being in order as one of the Chicago games was postponed on the team's last visit to this city. The first game will start at 2 o'clock.

After the strenuous games with Pittsburgh, the Stallings crew ought not to find the Cubs extra hard opponents, as the Pirates these days are moving at an even better clip than the Chicagos.

Lefty Tyler, who has had a chance to rest up since last Friday, will probably fling in the first game for the Pilgrims, as he is usually very effective against the Cubs.

For the Cubs, Evers will trot out his best bet, Larry Cheney, to oppose Tyler, as he is anxious to clean up the coming series and figures a good start will turn the trick.

Big Trade Planned by Cubs and Dodgers

NEW YORK, July 17.—Roger Bresnahan and Heinie Zimmerman for Smith and Allen is the big deal that is in the air between the Chicago Cubs and the Brooklyn club.

There are some who are close to the Brooklyn club who say that this is the beginning of the end of Bill Dahlen as manager of the Brooklyn team. The reason for this is that the McKeever brothers, who have a large interest in the club, are not satisfied with the way Dahlen has been handling the team and want a change.

This would indicate that Bresnahan would be taken and then made manager of the club. Allen is a pitcher, while Smith has been playing fine ball for the Dodgers at third base. The general opinion seems to be that the deal would not be a bad one for either club.

HOT LINERS

The Giants have won their last five games and are now 24 points ahead of Philadelphia.

* * *

First arrangements have been made for the 'round the world tour of the Giants and the White Sox at the end of the present season.

* * *

Pitcher Joe Boehling of the Washington Senators has put across nine consecutive wins, although he does not get much glory for his performance against St. Louis yesterday.

* * *

The Athletics have played at only a .500 clip in the West this trip, but the Cleveland Naps haven't been able to take any material advantage of the fact.

* * *

By winning yesterday the Phillies made a clean sweep of the series with St. Louis.

* * *

It is semi-officially reported that the trade between the New York Yankees and the Chicago White Sox involving Hal Chase, Rollie Zeider and Borton will be subjected to an investigation by the league authorities. Frank Chance, manager of the Yanks, has requested the club owners to carry the case to the highest baseball court for investigation.

* * *

Earl Moore, one of the pitchers of the Philadelphia Nationals, has been sold to the St. Louis Cardinals for $3,000.

* * *

But for Controller Walter's sensational one-hand catch yesterday, Cleveland would have taken two games from the Yankees instead of one.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. G. MITCHELL

MANAGER BILL started off all right, didn't he? Shifted the batting order the first crack out of the box, pulled out the pitcher when he appeared to be losing his stuff, AND won the game.

A playing manager who is a catcher has an advantage, all other things being equal, over a manager who plays any other position. Behind the bat he is able to tell instantly when his pitcher is losing control, or losing stuff or is tiring. He knows better than anyone else when a fresh pitcher ought to be sent to the box. A playing manager in any other position on the field does not have that advantage. He can tell of course, when a pitcher is "losing out," but he may not discover it until long after the catcher has known the fact, and when he does find out it may be too late.

THE ethics of baseball are such that a catcher will not intimate to his manager that the pitcher is losing his stuff. He leaves that for the manager to find out for himself. There are many reasons for this. One is that a manager is not likely to act on advice from his catcher. Another is that the catcher might not care to get in bad with the pitcher. Still another is that a catcher feels that he is doing his own work the best he can, and it is up to the manager to do the manager's work. Also, if a change was made in pitchers on the recommendation of a catcher, and the game lost through the original pitcher would feel sore at the catcher, the second pitcher would feel sore at the catcher, the catcher would feel sore at himself, and the manager, maybe, would feel sore at all hands. So the catcher, if he be not the manager of the team, usually keeps his mouth shut and lets matters take their course.

SEE what a fine position Manager Bill is in. For example, when Ray Collins shows signs of blowing up, Manager Bill promptly yanks him out of the box and sends Bedient to the rubber sash. True, the Tigers score a couple off Hugh, BUT the Red Sox win in the end, and that, after all, is the answer.

IN the palmy days of horse racing in New York there was a turfman named John J. McCafferty. He owned a string of horses, and not only owned them, but trained them and rode them himself in races. Three blessed McCaffertys! As owner he had no double fear that his trainer was lying to him about the condition of his horses, or that his jockey would "pull" a horse in a race. When he bet his money he knew what he was betting on.

AND so it is with Manager Bill. When his pitcher is beginning to wobble he is the first to know it. This really means a lot in a ball game. It gives Manager Bill a shade the advantage in every game he catches, although pitchers do one of the most important duties that a manager has to perform—that and the pinch-hitting department. Manager Bill pulled off some pinch hitting stunts on the Tigers, too, and got away with it in the style.

THE fans like to see this sort of thing. It shows the manager is trying the best he knows how to win the game. See how Connie Mack has worked his pitchers this season. See how Clarke Griffith works his bunch. See how Jimmy Calahan's shifts his twirlers. This was a great bunt of Fielder Jones when he was manager of the White Sox. He won a championship doing it.

THE Boston Nationals ran up against some good pitching in the series with the Pirates. But, by the same token, the Pirates ran up against some good pitching, too. All the Boston twirlers worked well in the four games, although Dave Pefue, the celebrated, under-rated, cultivated batsman, was the only one to be on the winning side. Otto Hess pitched a gilt-edged article in the windup, and if his team-mates had been able to hit Camnitz once or twice, when they had opportunities to send in runs, the score would have been different. But the breaks were against the fair-haired Otto. The Rabbit looted one, and then Wilson drove the ball over the fence. These two runs were enough to win, as Camnitz was there in every pinch except one.

STALLINGS changed his batting order a little bit. McDonald, who has not been hitting well since the team got back home, was laid off, and Devlin put back on third until Stallings gave Mac a chance to bat in the seventh. Clymer was put up in second place, and the third base combination shoved down a notch in the batting order. It may be that Fred Smith will be tried out at third base in a day or two. Why not? He fields like wildfire in practicing practice. He is a sure enough ball player, and all he needs is experience. No time like the present to get it.

BUD SHARPE, the club's scout, is in Boston, after covering the teams in the South. Whatever Bud has to say or may be found down there is for Stallings' ears.

THE Cubs, headed by Johnny Evers, are here today to begin a series. They will engage in a double-header with the locals this afternoon. We hope to see a full out of them, not because we are fighting for the pennant, but just out of pure cussedness.

Little and Pell Continue Victories

NEW YORK, July 17.—R. D. Little and T. H. Pell, the international pair of the New Yorks respectively, continued their winning streak in the Round-Robin doubles on the turf courts of the Country Club of Westchester by defeating C. H. Jackson and J. B. Cornell, at 6—0, 6—0, in easy fashion. The Princeton pair, G. M. Church and Dean Mathey, also won their match. F. Sheldon Brown and W. P. Burden scored a victory over H. E. Rawlins and H. L. Stevenson, Jr., and L. E. Mahan and C. M. Bull, Jr., also hung up their first tally on the winning score by defeating the Princeton pair, one of the most important duties that a manager has to perform—that and the pinch-hitting department. Manager Bill pulled off some pinch hitting stunts on the Tigers, too, and got away with it in the style.

Umpire Evans Goes After Annoying Fan

ST. LOUIS, July 17.—Umpire "Billy" Evans of the American League staff won a run-of-the-mill scrap when he knocked selling him harsh names during the Washington-St. Louis contest here yesterday. After the scuffle he unpinned his shirt sleeve, but its owner had vanished. Evans, after the game, asked the noisy spectator to step down on the field. The man climbed over the railing of the grand stand and walked up to the umpire, who asked him to come underneath the stand and settle matters. When the arbiter's critic learned he was in for a fight he cried for help. Evans caught hold of his shirt sleeve and tried to pull him into the dressing room, but instead pulled the sleeve out of the man's shirt.

American Defeated in Slugging Game

The AMERICAN tems lost a hard hitting game to the Transcript in the Newspaper League series at Ringe Field, Cambridge, yesterday, by the score of 10 to 6. Five home runs were made during the contest, Wilson getting two and H. Doherty, Smith and Hobbs one each. Smith Doherty and Hobbs were the fielding features of the day, his fast work cutting down what looked like sure hits. Gerrish and Brophey played best for the Transcript. The score:

Transcript... 0 3 2 0 0 1 0 4 x—10 7 3

Hartford Cancels All Sunday Games

HARTFORD, July 17.—James H. Clarkin, owner of the local team of the Eastern Baseball Association, has requested President James H. O'Rourke of the league to cancel all Sunday dates which may have been scheduled for his team for the remainder of the season. He will play no more Sunday games, he says. Clarkin and nine members of his team were fined in New Haven for violation of the law by playing Sunday ball.

Cobb's Suspension Not Fixed as Yet

NEW YORK, July 17.—President Johnson of the American League confirmed the suspension of Ty Cobb for his run-in with Umpire Hildebrand explaining that it had been automatic as a result of a telegraphic request sent by the umpire to Chicago offices of the league.

"When I receive the official report of the case," he added, "I will fix the time of the suspension."

Free Baseball Tickets for You, Fans! Root for Red Sox! Root for Braves!

If you hold one of the numbered baseball checks which the AMERICAN has distributed broadcast, it would be well for you to closely scan the sport pages of the AMERICAN'S Sporting Extra Edition today, tomorrow and every day until further notice.

Every one of the small checks which have been, and are being distributed, is numbered. The AMERICAN prints, each day, in the Sporting Extra Edition 100 duplicate numbers. If you hold a check, all you have to do is to compare the number printed on it with the list of numbers printed in the Sporting Extra Edition each day and, when a duplicate of the number you hold appears in the AMERICAN, it entitles you to a free ticket to any one of the Red Sox or Pilgrims' games—take your choice, it costs you nothing.

"Standing room only" is the watchword at Fenway Park, and at the Walpole street grounds these days, but holders of AMERICAN numbered checks do not have to stand up, as the tickets now being issued entitle the holders to a grandstand seat at any game and at any time during the season of 1913.

Remember, all you have to do is to watch the daily list in the Sporting Extra Edition of the AMERICAN, and when a duplicate of the number you hold appears, bring or send same to the AMERICAN Promotion Department, No. 5 Winthrop square, and you will receive a free ticket to any one of the Red Sox or Braves' games on the home grounds.

If YOU haven't yet obtained any of these checks, ask your newsdealer or newsboy, who will be glad to supply you.

Checks may also be obtained at AMERICAN Promotion Department.

Watch your numbers carefully. If your number does not appear today it may tomorrow. When it does, it means a free Red Sox or Pilgrim ticket for you.

Liefield Refuses to Go to the Minors

CHICAGO, July 17.—"Lefty" Leifield, for years a star pitcher in the major leagues, will not join the Atlanta club, to which he was sold by the Chicago Nationals. He left for St. Louis, his home, where he plans to enter business.

Association Game Goes 19 Innings

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 17.—The longest game staged thus far this season in the larger baseball leagues was played yesterday by the Milwaukee and Columbus teams of the American association, who struggled 19 innings. Milwaukee won, 6 to 5, using four pitchers. It was the longest game ever played in the association.

DETROIT, Mich., July 17.—The second game of the series between the Red Sox and Detroit Tigers will be played today, with Bedient opposing Jean Dubuc on the mound.

Bedient pitched two innings against the Tigers yesterday, but Manager Carrigan plans to send him right back again in today's game. It is also probable that the new manager may use Joe Wood, and in this case, young Thomas will work behind the bat.

The Red Sox awoke this morning feeling as though they had accomplished something under their new manager. They walloped the Tigers in the first game of the series and regained their long lost batting eyes. Fourteen hits for a total of nineteen is a very good day's work and that is what the Sox did. The success of the Sox at bat yesterday may induce Manager Carrigan to keep Clyde Engle at the top of the batting list.

The confidence that the players have in their new manager was shown by their work in yesterday's game and also proved that President McAleer's lecture had a telling effect. The men displayed much more pepper than on their last visit to this city and showed from the start that they were out to win.

Zeider Was O. K., Says Comiskey

CHICAGO, July 17.—Charles A. Comiskey, president of the Chicago Americans, ridicules Frank Chance's reported threat to take the Hel Chase-Rollie Zeider-Borton trade up to the national commission on charges that Zeider was turned over in bad physical condition and that Borton is playing ability was overrated. "The trade is perfectly fair to New York," said Comiskey. "Zeider was in good condition and fit to play when he left here. As for Borton, Chance saw him perform against the Cubs in the Chicago city series and was impressed with his ability. I don't think Chance will commit the absurdity of taking these allegations to the commission."

Mystery in Johnson's Attack on McAleer

"Czar of Baseball" Says Treatment of Stahl Insult to the American League

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

President Johnson, of the American League, says "McAleer had no business to dismiss Jake Stahl in such a cruel fashion * * * His (Stahl's) treatment by McAleer is an insult to the American League."

The chances are that McAleer has offended the "Czar of Baseball" in some manner else Johnson would not have made this attack on the President of the Boston Club. And the offence must have come since McAleer was made president of the club a year and a half ago; for from the time the American League was organized Johnson stood behind McAleer.

It was McAleer who was instrumental in signing several National League stars when the two major league organizations were at war a decade ago. It was Johnson who found a berth for McAleer as manager of the St. Louis Browns. It was Johnson who made McAleer manager of the Washington Club. It was Johnson who recommended that McAleer be made president of the Boston club when John I. Taylor wished to retire as head of the organization.

Johnson has been behind McAleer in all his baseball dealings ever since the American League began business.

Johnson Backed Stahl.

The attack that Johnson now makes on McAleer is proof to those who know Johnson well that the "Czar of Baseball" has it in for the president of the Boston club for some reason that does not appear on the surface.

It is true that Johnson has always stood back of Stahl ever since he graduated from the University of Illinois and joined Jimmy Collins' team as a catcher away back in the early nineties. It was Johnson who made Stahl manager of the Washington club a year or two later and backed him to the limit in spite of the vigorous protests of the fans of Washington and the newspapers of Washington. It was Johnson who, when Stahl quit the game several years ago, manipulated things so that Mr. Jake could re-enter baseball without being fined as Kling was and as nearly every ball player who does what Stahl did is fined.

Here are two men—McAleer and Stahl—that have always been especial pets of the president of the American League. He has stood behind them, found places for them, used his tremendous influence for them at every stage of the game. Now he takes the part of the manager against the president.

Stahl Got Showdown.

Johnson apparently had not read the statements given out by both men in relation to the row they had in Chicago, if he had read these statements he would have seen that Stahl sought a "showdown" from McAleer and got it. From the words of the two men it would appear that Stahl humiliated himself.

To find the reason of Johnson's attack on McAleer, one must find what McAleer has done to offend the "Czar of Baseball." When that is done the situation will become clear.

Johnson is said to be headed for Detroit to have a "showdown" with McAleer. Johnson is a stubborn man, who does not hesitate to say what is on his mind. McAleer has a temper that makes the fur fly when it is aroused. It may be that when the two men come together there will be said and printed things that will humiliate the American League far more than McAleer's dismissal of Stahl.

BAN JOHNSON BITTER OVER THE DISMISSAL OF MANAGER STAHL

NEW YORK, July 17.—Ban Johnson, the big chief of the American League, has struck the war trail.

He is westward bound, gunning for one James McAleer, president of the world's champion Red Sox. He expects to hook-up with his adversary to-day somewhere in the vicinity of Detroit. If old Pshaw-Knee Tecumseh's historic bones do not turn over in envy of Ban's war cry then the fellow who found Johnson making medicine at the Wolcott yesterday afternoon must have suffered hallucination.

"McAleer," declared Johnson, "had no business to dismiss Jake Stahl in such cruel fashion. He humiliated him in the eyes of the sporting world right in his home town. Stahl was not to blame for the poor showing of the Red Sox this season.

"Injuries put the world's champions out of the race. Stahl deserves far better treatment for what he accomplished last year. It was he, and not McAleer, who won a pennant and a world's championship in 1912.

"Stahl informed me recently," continued Johnson, "that there has been no dissention in his ranks and I believe him. He was a conscientious and competent manager. His treatment by McAleer is an insult to the American League. It is likely to draw down upon our heads the ridicule of organized baseball.

"You may say for me that the unconditional release of Stahl does not go in the accepted sense of the word. He may have been fired with ten days notice. But he will be paid by Boston every cent that his contract calls for, and his two years' contract does not expire until the end of the present season."

Abe Attell Matched to Meet Beecher

NEW YORK, July 17.—Abe Attell was today matched to meet Willie Beecher, the East Side lightweight, in a ten round bout to be held at Rockaway, Tuesday night. They will meet at 133 pounds ringside.

LOCAL ATHLETES WILL BE BUSY UNTIL THE FALL

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

More track and field meetings will be held during the coming weeks than ever before in the history of New England.

Starting with the Norwood Press games at Berwick Park, Norwood, next Saturday where every athlete of note in Greater Boston will compete, the list of meets extend far into September. Besides these games many more will be held that have not obtained a sanction up to the present time.

Rhode Island Meet.

On July 24 the Chalmers-Get of Rhode Island will hold forth at the new running track that has been erected at Crescent Park, R. I.

Following this meet the Shoeworkers of Lynn and the Moose of New Hampshire will both hold games on the 26th.

The annual Scotch games will be held as usual on the first Saturday of August. This is one of the biggest picnics and field meets in the city during the year and both amateur and professional athletes will have an opportunity of competing. After the regular track meet a ten mile professional race will be held.

On August 16 the local athletes will have two more meetings but these will not conflict, as one occurs in Hamilton and the other at Manchester, N. H. The Boston Athletic Association relay team will race the Irish American Club at Hamilton in a special one mile relay. It has been the boast of the Back Bay Club that they were well able to cope with any relay team in the country and this race has been arranged as the result of that statement.

Other Games in Line.

Although the Irish American Club has not the services of any world beaters at the quarter mile distance they will have a strong team entered. The B. A. A. is not much better in this respect as they have but few good quarter-milers in shape at the present time.

Besides these games arrangements are being made for two more sets of games in Rhode Island, one at Woonsocket and the other under the direction of the Order of Eagles of that State.

Ledoux Injured in Williams Bout

LOS ANGELES, July 17.—Charles Ledoux, champion bantamweight of France, defeated by Kid Williams of Baltimore here Tuesday night, was said to be in bad condition from blows received during the fight. His physicians say he sustained a severe injury in the groin.

Phil Knight Barred.

BUTTE, Mont., July 17.—Following a special meeting of the State boxing commission, Phil Knight of Kansas City was barred from fighting in the State because of foul tactics in his recent bout with Steve Ketchell, the Western lightweight.

National Commission to Probe Chase Deal

NEW YORK, July 17.—It was semi-officially announced here that the recent trade between the New York and Chicago clubs of the American League, involving Hal Chase, Rollie Zeider and Borton, will be subjected to an investigation by the league authorities. Manager Frank Chance has requested his club officers to carry the case in the baseball courts on the grounds that he was deliberately deceived regarding the condition of Borton and Zeider, whom he accepted in exchange for Chase.

Chance claims that he was personally assured by Manager Callahan of the White Sox that both Zeider and Borton were physically capable of playing big league ball. This statement, according to Chance, was far from being a fact since Zeider had been spiked by Ty Cobb in Detroit two weeks before the trade and was under the care of the club trainer and physician as a result of the accident at the time of the trade. Borton has proved a failure.

Joe Thomas Defeated.

BUTTE, Mont., July 17.—Dan Cummings of Chicago was given a decision over Joe Thomas of San Francisco at the end of a twelve-round contest at Anaconda.

Hicks—Clabby Matched.

BUTTE, Mont., July 17.—Freddie Hicks of Pittsburgh and Jimmy Clabby of Hammond, Ind., have been matched for a twelve-round bout here August 2.

LITTLE LOST SISTER — By Virginia Brooks

A Story of the Author's Own Experiences in Chicago's Underworld

Copyright, 1912, by American Journal and S. S. and L. A. Hammons.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Trail of Watchful Johnny

MARTHA COLE was just a little girl of fifteen working in a mail order house when I met her. I was working in the same mail order place, looking for experience.

Martha came from a little country town and her mother was very poor. The father had been a railway man—had died in an accident. There were two other children, and Martha had to contribute as far as possible to the support of the family.

The little girl was paid $6 a week. While plainly clad, she was neat, and with her dark brown hair, big, lustrous eyes and slight, girlish figure, she was undeniably attractive.

Martha's mother fell ill something over a year ago, and the child was appealed to for funds. She was then employed as a cashier.

There was no way in the world for Martha to help her mother except by borrowing money. She tried to do this and failed. Then she took $15 from the cash of the firm and sent it to her poverty-stricken home. For nine weeks she replaced a small amount each week out of her pay, intending ultimately to discharge the whole debt. Then the cash was audited and she was discovered.

In a flood of tears she told her story. Twenty minutes later she was in the street without a friend, without a character, a sick mother on her hands and no prospect of honest employment. One of the girls she had met in the place introduced her to "Watchful Johnny" of the System. Johnny knew a way out of such difficulties. He lent Martha money to send to her mother. From that minute he owned her.

In Street Without a Friend

A week later one of the women from the Rescue Mission found Martha in red slippers and a red kimono in the very heart of the "district." She was delirious with drugs and had almost forgotten her own name. She was taken to the Midnight Mission and put to bed. The woman who had harbored her was taken to task for her share in the transaction, but she pleaded ignorance of the girl's story.

From the Midnight Mission Martha was taken to the Home for Girls, 2119 Calumet avenue. This is a "home" in the real sense. It takes a girl in, gives her aid and comfort and questions her afterward. Little Martha, who is at heart a good, honest girl, now has excellent employment, and the fortunes of the Cole family are at flood tide.

In connection with this particular case I came very close to landing the particular "Watchful Johnny" who put Martha in the "district," but these "Johnnies" be slippery fish, the System's protected workers. They command the best of legal talent and generally manage to wriggle through holes in the net. This fellow found one, and got away without punishment. I hope to get him yet. We are making nets with smaller meshes.

Now harken to the story of Lizzie McLean. The child was sent to Chicago from Scotland to be taken care of by an aunt whom the parents had not known intimately for nearly eighteen years.

Much may happen in eighteen years. The aunt has been for nearly ten years engaged in "rooming-house" enterprises in Chicago. She is by no means a despicable character. In fact, she has a police record.

Of course, Lizzie McLean's parents in bonnie Scotland did not know that. So when the generous and wealthy Chicago aunt of the little Highland lassie offered to pay her way to Chicago and find here remunerative employment—perhaps marry her to a rich man—the old-country folk were very glad to let their pretty daughter have her chance.

Jumps Out of Hotel Window

Now, what happened to Lizzie when she reached Chicago was this: She entered the place run by her aunt, and for a while was permitted to absorb ideas of "American life" in that atmosphere. Her aunt assured her that the patrons of the place, who made so merry and appeared to have so much fun, were "leading society men and women."

At last one of the "leading society men" became enamored of Lizzie, who was just entering her seventeenth year. He took her about a great deal, and Lizzie's aunt furnished her with fashionable clothes so that she might cut a dash in the quasi-fashionable world.

One night a girl jumped out of a window in the second story of a cheap hotel and was picked up unconscious. The hospital authorities said she might die. An investigation revealed that the girl had been taken to the hotel by a man, but the man's identity was lost. He had disappeared.

Subsequently Lizzie told me what had happened. The "leading society man" had taken her to the hotel on the pretext that he was to meet her aunt there, and they were to dine together. The man lied. What followed caused Lizzie to jump out of the window.

Child Lands at Station

Lizzie's aunt is now a fugitive from justice and Lizzie is employed in a satisfactory way. She is under the protection of women who will see that she does not again fall into the hands of our familiar friend, "Watchful Johnny," who ofttimes masquerades as a "leading society man."

Then there was Sarah Roe. Fourteen years old, Sarah was, when she walked into the street station with a vague idea that she could find relatives in Lake View. Probably the old mother of Sarah, who sent her West because she was unable to support her, supposed that Lake View was a place where it was easy to find out from the neighbors where any one lived.

When I became acquainted with Sarah it was in a saloon rear room. She was with two older women, and her innocent young face attracted my attention. I sat down at the table where Sarah was. She was very green. The other women told me she had knocked at their door a few nights before and asked for shelter. The companions of the girl belonged to that class of "married" women that frequents the rear rooms of saloons.

Fifteen minutes' talk with Sarah convinced me that she was in dangerous company. She had been told by the women with whom I found her that the easiest way for her would be to "pick up a friend." I took Sarah with me against the protests of these harridans, who said that they had "done everything for her." Sarah is now a cashier in a Loop restaurant, employed by a kind-hearted man, who pays her well and tells me that she is thoroughly competent. Also she is under the guardianship of an organization that will protect her from harm in the future. It was only by good fortune that Sarah escaped the hawk eyes and talons of "Watchful Johnny" of the System.

This sounds like repetition, doesn't it? Well, the troubles of Little Lost Sisters are singularly alike. They have a familiar ring when one hears them from trembling lips twenty or thirty times a week. The reason I am telling of these little girls one after another in this way is that I want to hammer home the truth about the problem that confronts us.

So I'm going right on with the story.

Four girls came to Chicago from a little town one evening and went direct to a house in Armour avenue, the address of which had been given them by a man who had visited their town a month before. He became too friendly with one of the girls, Carroll Brown, aged eighteen. Carroll was so fascinated with the tales this man told her of gayety at the Armour avenue place that she persuaded four other young girls to join her in an expedition. It was a runaway. You see this man did not violate the Mann act. He merely told stories of a Chicago fairyland likely to appeal to the fancy of a country-town girl.

Spells Danger in Capitals

The woman in charge of this place took the girls in, but after talking to them she became convinced that they were novices.

Now, one novice might be handled without too much trouble, but four novices spell "danger" in large capital letters. The woman became alarmed, and, being wise in her generation, she notified the Rescue Home people. Two of the women from the Rescue Mission called at the Armour avenue place and took those girls away. The woman who called up made much of her determination "never to be instrumental in the fall of an innocent girl."

What she feared was the consequences. One of the girls—the Brown girl—is naturally bad. She has been put in five different employments since her release from the Armour avenue place. She is abnormal, and it may be difficult to save her. The real place for her is an insane hospital, because her ailment is largely mental. The others were very glad to be taken care of. One of them is the wife of a respectable mechanic, two are employes of a downtown firm that finds them competent, and the other is the protege as ladies' maid of one of the best-known women in the city. She is a gifted child, with no real vice about her. Once again "Watchful Johnny" was foiled.

Story of the Man in the Case

One afternoon I was walking in North Clark street when I met a girl who did not seem to be more than fourteen. She was pretty, her pert little nose was high held, and the cheap clothes clung to her with a certain chic that distinguished her.

I stopped to speak. She was uppish at first and then interested. I asked her where she was working, and she told me she had been discharged from a department store because of inexperience. She had met a "fellow" who was going to marry her. She became confidential and told me that she was really living with the man in a room over on North Dearborn, but it was only to be for a couple of weeks; the reason was that if his folks knew he was married in advance of certain legal procedure he would lose several thousand dollars.

The story sounded rather familiar. I wanted to see the man. She was delighted at having found a friend who was not shocked at her story, and agreed to take me with her to meet "Bill," who was to be in the rear of a North Clark street saloon at 2 p. m. When I entered that room with the girl her putative future husband nearly tore the spring doors getting through them to the street.

The man was "Watchful Johnny" in one of his disguises.

Katie lived in a little town downstate, where she was one of the belles. I corresponded with her mother, who turned out to be a perfectly incompetent sort of person. There are too many such incompetent parents.

They Do Save Some of Them

The Home for Girls took care of Katie. Nobody knew what had happened except myself and the superintendent of the Home. Katie was there four weeks, and she proved herself a very bright little housekeeper. Now she is taking care of the Summer home of excellent people at Lake Carver. They know all about her, but she doesn't know it, and they are too wise to let her suspect that they do. The girl is giving satisfaction, and the woman who took her is going to give her an expensive course of instruction in domestic science. She says Katie is worth it.

So, you see, we do save some of them. I wish the proportion were greater. What we need to increase the proportion I am going to tell you in the concluding chapters of the story.

But the Home that has had so large a share in saving girls is worthy of a little attention here. It is not, you will observe, distinguished by any name that suggests charity or philanthropy of any sort. It is just the "Home for Girls," not for delinquent girls," or destitute girls," or any other characterizing title.

The Home is at 2119 Calumet avenue. Its purpose is to take care of girls who have been wronged, but have not become hardened in habits of sin. Preventive work is uppermost in the minds of those who are at the head of it. Their greatest satisfaction is in rescuing a girl from the clutches of "Watchful Johnny" before he has really left his marks upon her. Girls of all denominations are taken; girls of all nationalities are welcome. No board is charged and the only duties are those of the household.

The house is a mansion formerly the home of General and Mrs. "Jack" Logan. There are seventeen bedrooms, and nearly always there is room for "one more Little Sister."

The superintendent is Mrs. Susan B. Addams. The girls all call her mother. She is a large-minded, understanding woman, and her experience is vast. In another chapter I am going to tell more about "The Home for Girls."

Little Bobbie's Pa

THERE was a young man up to see Pa & Ma last nite, his name is Blackstone Smith. He just left college & he is going to be a lawyer, he dount know in wich town until he hears from all the towns that is after him & then he will pick out the town he likes best.

Any first naim seems to fit Smith pritty good, sed Pa. Wen are you going to begin laying down the law to the world? Maybe my firm can swing sum bizness pure way, Pa sed, if you locate here in town. My firm is always in trubbel. They dount listen to my advice.

I shall be glad to straiten them out after I start my office, sed Blackstone Smith. That is, I shall endeavor to adjust, adjudicate, transact, perform & otherwise accomplish such leegal acts & deeds as you may then or at any future time bring, fetch or cause to be brung or fetched to my office. Of course I shall expect a sutabel honorarium, he sed.

A what? sed Pa.

A sutabel honorarium, sed Blackstone Smith. A fee that is commensurate with my skill & my leegal lore.

Oh, that will be all rite, sed Pa, I will see that the firm pays you about what you are worth. That wordent brake my firm, sed Pa.

The Superior Sex

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

MAN is so conceited that if a woman refuses to kiss him he attributes her objection to poverty, she wouldn't kiss any man! He never thinks that she might kiss others, but wouldn't kiss him.

A man's idea of chivalry is to protect a woman from every man but himself.

Nothing makes one of the superior sex more angry than to arrive at home with something to growl about, find company there and be compelled to be pleasant.

There is nothing more or less than plain common jealousy at the bottom of every man's objection to his wife's religion.

After a man has eaten the good dinner his wife has prepared he begins to look at her critically because she is wearing her kitchen clothes.

There never was a man so honest that he will say to his wife: "Where did I put my hat?" He always says, "Where have you put my hat?"

Laugh at a man's jokes, even if you have heard them before. Laugh long and merrily because you are not his wife and do not have to hear them every day.

It takes a man to grumble because dinner is not ready and then become interested in a newspaper and keep dinner waiting till it is cold.

If men would tell their true thoughts, women would run from them.

If a man is blind and deaf and dumb and sits in a corner, then his wife should have faith in him.

The colonels who have never been in the army, the majors who have never enlisted, and the captains who have smelled neither powder nor salt water are among the vast number of men who laugh at the woman who borrows flury.

Jealousy

The teacher was addressing his pupils on the subject of laziness and idleness.

He drew a terrible picture of the habitual loafer—the man who dislikes work and who begs for all he gets.

"Now, John," said the teacher to a little boy who had been very inattentive during the lesson.

John was instantly on the alert.

"Tell me," continued the teacher, "who is the miserable individual who gets clothes, food and lodging and yet does nothing in return?"

John's face brightened.

"Please sir," said he, "the baby."

Do You Know That—

An ocean steamer of the first class, going at full speed, cannot be brought to a standstill in less than three minutes, in which time she will have traversed a distance of about half a mile?

Canada is nearly thirty times as large as Great Britain and Ireland, the total area of the Dominion being only 237,000 square miles less than that of the whole continent of Europe?

Leo Bours, a wealthy resident of Venice, Cal., became jealous of the admiration aroused by his wife's beautiful tresses and cut them off? For this his wife obtained a divorce?

A Bachelor's Diary

He and Mannette Have a Fine Time in the Country, but He Gets Very Morose Later On

By MAX

JUNE 26—Though I have the time, I have not learned to spell the long name of the little postoffice where Mannette and I walk every morning to get the mail and send our daily letter to Richards, nor the longer name of the little lodge in the woods that is our home.

A man named John Allen and his wife occupy it, and occasionally take summer boarders, but Mannette and I will be the only ones during our stay. The doctor saw to that before I would consent to come.

He says the name of the postoffice had its origin in some Indian tradition. There was the usual Indian maiden (funny she is never referred to as an Indian girl in these legends, but always as an Indian maiden, and she loved a young brave who scorned her. You know the rest; plaintive swan song one twilight while standing on a rock jutting out over the rapids, and then a plunge to her death.

It is an injustice that so many songs and poems are written to honor those who die for love, when living for those we love is so much harder. I think some day I will attempt a plaintive wail about a heroine who married her lover and continued to love him through all his meanness, even after his hair and teeth had come out. There is rare inspiration in that for those who think love the greatest thing in the world.

This digression is due to my great amount of time for doing nothing. Mannette and I take no short cuts in and through the day, and the habit stays with me when I approach you, "My foolish Diary, at night."

VERY TIRESOME

I have been here ten days, and doing nothing has grown so tiresome I am glad to recall the little song that used to torment me when I was little and hated work. It begins with:

"There will be something in heaven for children to do. None are idle in that blessed land," and carries with it the soothing assurance that there will also be work for the adults, for we couldn't sit around on pink clouds in idleness and let kids do it all.

I hope I will be poor there, and have to work as hard as I worked when I was a young man. Then, and under no other circumstances, will I be happy.

This is our routine: We arise about six in the morning, and jump from our night clothes into swimming suits and make a quick run for a pool about a quarter of a mile from the house.

Mannette, who occupies a room adjoining mine, with a connecting door between, awakens without calling, gets into and out of her clothes without assistance, and often my first intimation that day has come is gained through feeling her little face pressed against mine and hearing her voice calling, "Wake up, Uncle Max; wake up," with the brown-eyed pup giving shrill barks to assist her.

For he is with us. No longer a wabbly-legged pup, he has become a sedate dog, with an affection for his little mistress that has grown with his years. "Take him," Sally Spencer urged, "then you will know the child has a guardian with her that no one may bribe or deceive."

So we brought him, and I am not sorry. Every night he sleeps on a little hard pallet at the foot of Mannette's bed, and his growl when he hears a mysterious sound is something fine to hear. He never leaves her, day or night, and on one occasion, when I sent him home alone with her a half mile through the woods, he yielded to no temptation of rabbit or squirrel on the bypaths, but walked close beside her on the main road, growling away down deep in his innermost insecurity all the way.

BE DIGRESSES

I seem to have digressed again. I make no apologies. That is what I am here for. To digress and to "forget many things in the love of a child."

After our plunge—and the water is cold, and many Richards never know it! It is not sterilized, and the brown-eyes pup plunges in with us—we run back to the house, get into our clothes and are as hungry as wolves for breakfast, which is always ready at seven.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen eat with us. I insisted on that. I felt that it would do us good, and, perhaps, if I succeed in keeping from them the knowledge that I am a very wealthy man, we will not hurt them. I have noticed with some sadness that the man who has much, be he ever so modest and simple in his tastes, can't associate with those who have little without finally awakening in the breast of those who have little a touch of envy. It is as if the rich man stirred a witch's cauldron, and the smoke from it contaminated the spirit of justice and contentment of all the poor who came near.

To them I am Max Blake, engaged in clerical employment and broken down through overwork, and Mannette is an orphan niece. I sometimes see a look of wonder on their faces when Mannette pratties of Richards, her nurse; Tompkins, who takes her on her pony, and at other times in her limousine; of Mary, the cook, and of the two or three maids around the house. It occurs to me at such times that they are penetrating through our disguise.

Our breakfast is simple, but wholesome and well cooked, and we enjoy it. After breakfast Mannette takes a nap and I read till she awakens. Then we wander around till dinner, and sometimes Mrs. Allen packs a dinner for us and we go off to the woods to eat it, spending the entire afternoon out in those spicy pine woods, away from everything and everybody, finding life is happiest under the conditions when a dog's chase after a rabbit is its most exciting event.

IN THE EVENING

In the evening Mannette sits in my lap in the porch, with the brown-eyed pup lying at my feet, and I unpack my brain for every fairy story I ever knew, and often, oh, so often, Diary, I talk to her about Elizabeth, the little brown-eyed girl who went home.

"Who," said Mrs. Allen one day of Mannette, "is this Elizabeth I hear your uncle talk about?"

"She is my sister," said Mannette, "and she has gone home."

"Gone home?" said Mrs. Allen. "What do you mean, child?"

"She has gone home," replied Mannette. "She was, oh, so sick, and Aunt Sally took me way, way off, and when we got back Lisbeth had gone home."

"Your two little nieces were of the same name as those little girls whose pictures have been in the papers so much," Mrs. Allen remarked to me one day later: "Elizabeth and Mannett H——." There, I almost gave the name away. I have never trusted it even in your ears, Diary!

"And Elizabeth died, just as your little girl died," she mused, without noticing my interruption.

Diary, the disguise is getting so thin the light is breaking through.

To go on with the story of our routine:

We are in bed before eight, for the days are short in these twilighted woods, and we sleep sound all night.

"Twilighted" has a strange look to me, but I am glad I haven't now some row of encyclopedias, reference books and dictionaries up here staring me reproachfully in the face because I don't look to see if I have any authority for using it.

And that is all these rows of encyclopedias, dictionaries and reference books do for a man—stare at him. Their addition to such shelves is a rebuke to him for being too lazy to investigate. When I bet home I will burn mine.

It Wouldn't Wash.

Farmer Tuttle was in London for the first time, and thought his best celebration of the occasion would be a good dinner at a smart restaurant.

"What cheese can ye recommend, man?" he inquired of the waiter. "I'd like something new."

"Will you try a little Roquefort, sir?" suggested the waiter.

"Hang it! I've ne'er heard of it, but bring it along. I loike the name, anyway.

The cheese particularly tickled his palate, and he thought his wife might like to try this "new" cheese. Arriving home late, he laid the small cheese, in its silver paper wrapping on the sideboard.

"It can't say as I likes your new-fangled London soap," said his wife next day as he came in from the fields. "It may be mighty stylish, but I couldn't kinder get any lather; and when I washing the children wi' it they grum bled like mad!"

Not Quite Right

A story is being told of a couple of tourists in Spain who could not speak the language, and, consequently, had some difficulty in making known their wants.

One day they came to a wayside inn and tried to obtain some more—coast beef, for choice. But nobody could understand them.

"What are we to do?" asked one of them despairingly.

"I know," said the other, a ray of hope appearing. "I'll draw a picture of a cow. Then they'll understand."

He made a rough sketch of a cow, put a "?" beneath it, and handed it to the waiter, who instantly smiled to show that he understood, and went off to exetiue their order.

A few minutes later he returned with two tickets for a local bull fight!

Burden Bearing

"Where have you been, Mary Ann?"

"I've been to the girls' Improvement class, ma'am," was the maid's reply.

"Well, and what did the curate say to you? Did you tell him who your mistress was?"

"Please, ma'am, he said I wasn't to give notice, as I intended, but that I was to consider you as my burden—and bear it."

Today's Beauty Recipes

By Mme. D'Mills.

"The beauty detecting crumbles of hair or fuzz on face or neck can be easily and quickly removed without fear of pain or discoloring the skin in the least simply by using a paste made by mixing a little water with enough powdered delatone to cover the hairy surface. This should be applied for two minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed to remove the surplus delatone. This is inexpensive, certain in results and leaves the skin lovely and free from scars or discoloration.

"The reason powder compositions look "mussy" in warm weather is because powder induces an excessive flow of perspiration, resulting in a 'shiny,' 'oily' look. A marvelous skin lotion, made by dissolving an original package mazatone in one-half pint witch hazel is a complexion dressing that can be applied in the morning and will last an entire day without further attention. This lotion establishes the daintiest complexion and to an unusually skin will give a clearness and youthful beauty truly charming. For tan, freckles, sunburn and other complexion ills the mazatone lotion is unequalled."—Adv.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing

By Lady Constance Stewart Richardson.

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

EVERYONE agrees that for the art of sculpture we cannot exceed the ancients. To me it seems that the Greeks had beautiful sculptured figures because they had wonderful models, and had wonderful models because they had a deep veneration for the almost divine beauty of the human form. And so out of this circle of perfection they chiseled glorious figures that we of today may use as models for the beautification of our own bodies.

Today I am showing you three figures, and I shall dwell at length on them and what we may hope to acquire from a practice of the poses they portray. Let us make a slight study of the expression of mood in plastic expression of countenance and body. For unless the face and body are attuned in the expression of a mood, there will be ungraceful uncertainty as a result.

THE FIRST FIGURE

The first figure on top might stand for a number of ideas—injured innocence is the most dramatic idea that it suggests. To me it simply is a marvelously simple pose, in which body and face express quiet dignity. Try it yourself—for it looks very easy to take a pose like this. But to stand poised firmly and gracefully on one foot, with the whole body balanced, ready to spring into motion and life and still at rest, is quite a feat. The ability to stand gracefully is rare—for people generally balance on heels or toes, or sag awkwardly on one hip.

Let me suggest an exercise for the acquisition of ability to stand gracefully. Balance the weight on the ball of the right foot, let the right arm hang easily at the side. Sway the body slightly to the left and raise the left arm to the chest at the same time rising on the toes of the left foot until the weight is all balanced on the right foot. Then sway the weight gradually to the left foot, rising on the right toe and lifting the right arm to the chest. Simply sway from foot to foot in exactly the posture that figure one shows you.

Figure two is eqaisy shown in one step of an old dance of triumph. It gives the most marvellous control of thigh, knee, ankle and instep, and will serve to bring down an accumulation of weight about the hips and thighs. Furthermore it insures a graceful control of arms and shoulders.

IS VERY SIMPLE

The practice of this seemingly complicated exercise is simple when once you carefully analyse the picture I have posed for you. Beginning with the left foot, rise slowly to the toes, at the same time raising the other leg with the knee bent and the instep so axed that the toes point almost perpendicular to the floor. The rising on the toes of one foot and the lifting of the other limb with the knee is far above the white line must be simultaneous.

Practice this first, alternating from one foot to the other, with the arms hanging at the sides.

Then combine the arm and leg motion, and see what a gain in balance results.

Lift the arms with drooping wrists, and as the hands reach the shoulders, and the elbows are at waist height, turn the fingers up, at the same time turning out the hands above the raised knee, and elevating the up-pointing fingers of the other hand above the head.

THE LAST FIGURE

Poise, balance and reduction of superfluous hip-flesh—is this not a vast deal of gain from one dancing exercise? The last figure illustrates a little faun like movement, that is splendid for back, throat and instep, as well as for flexibility of wrist. Walk forward on tiptoes, with the uplifted hands crossing first to the right and then to the left as the body's weight is thrown first on the right and then on the left foot. When the weight is coming on the right foot and the right wrist is foremost, throw the head to the right and give the body (which must be bent slightly back throughout the exercise) a slight turn to the right. Alternate this from foot to foot.

Always practice these exercises in regular alternation, from right to left or left to right, and back again, to insure even bodily development. Real beauty of form demands as first requisite absolutely even and uniform development, for only when it is absolutely normal in the body truly lovely as Our Maker meant it to be.

In the Figure on Top, Lady Constance Shows How to Stand Gracefully. A Simple Exercise in Swaying from Foot to Foot. This Will Teach You How to Balance the Weight Properly. The Next Figure Below Will Bring Grace to Arms and Shoulders. Besides This It is a Splendid Exercise for Reducing Hips and Thighs.

In the Last Figure Lady Constance Gives a Little Tip-Toe Exercise

These pictures were especially posed for this page.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DON'T BE HASTY IN JUDGMENT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen, and have been keeping company steadily with a young man two years my senior, for the past year and a half.

We are to be married next month.

Last week while visiting a theatre with my mother, I met this young man with my girl friend.

Do you think I would live a happy life marrying this man who proved so untrue? ANXIOUS.

HAVE you given him a chance to explain?

You say him that much. But if, after hearing his explanations, you still doubt him, you must give him up. There is no happy marriage without faith.

THE GIRL IS FICKLE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen, and deeply in love with a girl the same age. I have told her this and she has told me she loves me very dearly. She keeps company with another young man, but she tells me she does not love him half as much as she loves me, but that she cannot stop keeping company with him, as she has kept company with him for over a year. She has even accepted an engagement ring from him. P. D.

THIS girl is acting very dishonorably. She shows no respect for you or your rival, and, what is more, shows none for herself. Give her up for some girl who will be true to you. She will not be hard to find.

HE IS NOT THE MAN FOR YOU

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl of eighteen and am considered very pretty. I met a young man whom I like very much. He has called several times to take me out, and when he called last Sunday I was out, so when we met again he acted very cool.

LAURA.

YOU broke no engagement, and owe him neither explanation nor apology. His unfairness and selfishness make us hope you will conquer any growing love for him.

YOU MIGHT WRITE IT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am forty years of age and deeply in love with a man of forty-five. About a week ago he asked me to marry him. I love him dearly, but I am too bashful to say yes.

AGNES B.

IT is difficult to credit one of your years with such a youthful sentiment, but if what you say is true you might write an acceptance.

Plenty of Time

Mr. Styles—I have two tickets for the opera.

Mrs. Styles—Oh, good! I'll go and put my hat on right away.

All right, dear. I guess you'll be ready in time. The tickets are for to-morrow night."

Feeling Above One's Neighbors

By WINIFRED BLACK

SHE was poor once herself—and now, her husband having made money, she feels above her old neighbors.

He was a stone mason and she used to do her own work—and never dreamed of having company for supper unless it was some old aunt or some one just over from the old country. She went to church on Sunday and to the church society meetings on week days and she always helped get the supper at the annual bazaar—and with that social life she was perfectly satisfied—but now—

Well, what "but now?"

Why shouldn't the poor woman live in a bigger house if her husband has the money to pay for it? Why should she "do her washing" when she can afford somebody else to do it? Would you? Honest and true, now, would you? I don't believe it.

Or, if you would, then I think you would be a very silly woman, and one who didn't deserve the good fortune her husband is pouring into her lap. What's the use of a man's making a fortune if his wife won't help him to spend it?

"Feels above her neighbors, does she? How do you know she does? And, whisper, wouldn't it be odd if she really was above these just a trifle?

Not because she has money now when she had none once, but because she is sensible enough to know what to do with money when she gets it. Maybe she likes books, music, pictures—perhaps she is tired of hearing about the week's washing and the week's fruit canning. Maybe she likes to hear something new once in a while—why not?

Her husband may not be the only one in the family with brains enough to get out of hard, wearing work.

Housework drudgery? Not a bit of it, no more than any other work. But this particular woman may not care for housework. Ought she to keep on doing it now that she doesn't have to, just to please you and her neighbors who "knew her when she," etc.

What a nuisance the "knew her when she" class—here is, anyhow!

I heard one of them talking the other day. It was in a little old-fashioned village, down in the Ozark Mountains.

"She" had gone away from the village and made a name for herself as a singer—she had married a man with money and she had made for herself a good solid niche in the world—and then she went back to the village to visit. She thought she might find some young girl there who needed the same chance she'd had and was worth helping to get it. She asked a lot of questions, took pains to meet all the young people—was the naughty talk of the village for her pains.

Well?

She said pigs instead of "hawgs," and never used a double negative once all the time she was there.

Did they admire their old friend for her good sense and cleverness in adopting the tone of the new world she lives in when she is at home? Not they. They giggled each other and giggled every time she spoke and called her "stuck up" behind her back.

Everything she had worked so hard to learn didn't mean one thing to them. They just said she was "putting on" and let it go at that—and the woman packed her modish suit case and put on her every-day hat—and went away a little sad—not because she felt "above" her old friends, because she was above them and couldn't help feeling it every time she went to see them again.

They had given up their little back water eddy—cherishing the old mistakes, the old customs, the old follies.

John Smith may go to town and make his way in the great world of men—make it honestly, fearlessly, fairly—fight his fight like a man and the son of a man. What is he when he goes "back home"? Just "Queer Jack Smith," whose father drank too much, and whose mother was the worst housekeeper in town.

It isn't Jack Smith's fault. It's the fault of his old neighbors. They stayed in the rut, and he got out of it—and nothing that he can do or think or say or dream or accomplish will make them see that that very fact shows that he really does amount to a little something even if his mother's bread always did sour and her cake fall on the very day of the Ladies' Aid picnic.

Come, come, old neighbor—don't keep your eyes shut so tight—open them and you'll see something interesting.

You used to lend her your gloves to go to town with and her brother always had to borrow a bat from your brother when he wanted to play ball—and now she has three hats to your one and has a laundress and a cook—well, what of it? Be proud of her, rejoice with her in her good luck and the good sense to know how to use it.

No one life has joy enough in it to go around—borrow a little from the old neighbor—get her to tell you how she lives, what she does, how she likes it all.

Put your eye to the crack in the fence of circumstances and look through. It will do you good to get a view of things—don't try to tear the fence down just because you happen to be on the wrong side of it.

"Feel above you," does she? Well, then, she'd learned very little with all her good fortune—unless, as I said before, she really is above you—and in that case—you know you can hardly blame her, can you?

Up-to-Date Jokes

A minister who was not averse to an occasional toddy hired an Irishman to clean out his cellar. Pat soon discovered a multitude of empty bottles, and hope repeated its specialty of springing eternal in the human breast. As he was carefully examining each bottle by holding it to the light, the minister saw him, and called out:

"They are all dead ones, Pat."

"They are are they?" replied the Irishman. "Well, there's one good thing about it, they all had the minister with them when they were dying."

"Do you think that Skinner can make a living by writing?"

"Make a living! Why, he'd make a living on a rock in the middle of the ocean if there was another man on the rock."

In the suitable way of villagers, they were discussing the matrimonial affairs of a couple who, though recently wed, had begun to find the yoke of Hymen a burden.

"Tis all along o' them hasty marriages," opined one castile old gentleman, who had been much to the fore in the discussion. "They did not make stand each other. They'd nobbut known each other for a matter of two year."

"Well, that seems long enough," said listener.

"Long eno'? Bah! You're wrong. When a body's courting he canna be too careful. Why, my courtship with Mary lasted a matter of nineteen years."

"You were certainly careful," agreed the listener. "And did you find your plan successful when you married?"

"Ye jump to conclusions hasty," said the old man. "I understood her then, so I didna marry her!"

STOCK MARKET AND LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were not as strong at the opening today as they were in late trading yesterday, but losses were small in most instances. There was irregularity at the start in Boston and at the end of the first hour Boston & Maine was up a point and New Haven a fraction, while some mining issues were higher and others lower. United Fruit advanced a little and Boston Elevated was almost a point lower.

The New York market was active, if not so strong. First hour transactions totalled around 100,000 shares. At the end of that period prices averaged better. Union Pacific preferred was up 2 and Union Pacific common was off ⅝. Canadian Pacific had recovered part of its early loss. Reading, Steel and Amalgamated were fractionally higher, as was American Can.

Prices irregular in N. Y.

At the opening the New York market did not retain the strength which marked its close yesterday and most prominent stocks sold lower. Canadian Pacific suffered the greatest loss, declaring 1½. The price of this issue was affected by London and Berlin selling in those markets.

In fact, prices in New York were depressed at the start by the reaction on foreign bourses. The Balkan situation was again a factor and labor troubles in South Africa were also considered by speculators. The Bank of England report was a good one, but its minimum discount rate remains unchanged. Consols did not reflect increased confidence as to the money outlook.

The lack of support from Europe was felt the more in New York because there was small demand for stocks on home account. Among stocks to show fairly losses were: Steel common ¼, Union Pacific ⅝, Southern Pacific ⅛, Reading ½, Amalgamated ¼, American Can ⅝, New York Central ¼, Erie ⅛, Chino ⅛, C. & O. ⅛, St. Paul ⅛ and American Smelting ⅛.

Within half an hour Steel, Amalgamated and American Can had recovered and made small gains.

The turn was quiet.

American stocks were above parity in London, but were unsteady.

Waiting for New Tariff.

Importers are waiting for the enactment of the new tariff bill to start a large amount of money. Under schedules, which will soon be in force, they will be able to get foreign goods into the American market on what is nearer a free trade basis than has ever been known in this country. The New York American describes the situation and says:

"More than $100,000,000 worth of merchandise is stored in the bonded warehouses of Greater New York today. Never on the face of the globe has there ever before been such an aggregation of everything that the soil yields and human industry produces.

The fifty-six great bonded warehouses are gorged almost to bursting with silks, teas, coffees, spices, oils, rugs, carpets, toys, textile fabrics, knit goods, glassware and pottery, jute, hemp, wool, chemicals—with everything in which the merchants of the world trade.

More than 200,000 tons of sugar, worth over $12,000,000, are in bond. The New York Stock Company alone has 80,000 bags of coffee; its warehouses, with a capacity of $1,000,000 cubic feet, are filled.

Of this $100,000,000 worth of imports $70,000,000 is held pending changes in the tariff; $30,000,000 is made up of working stock which the great industrial plants must use immediately and of goods that come in free. The duties on the $70,000,000 worth that is being held deliberately in bond amount to $35,000,000 under the present tariff law. The owners are waiting to see how much of this $35,000,000 benevolent Uncle Sam will "knock off."

When the new bill becomes law millions of dollars a day will be paid into the Custom House and to railroads, and coastline vessels will be offered an enormous amount of freight. The importer who has his goods on hand will have a great advantage over competitors.

For Protection of Bonds.

The House Banking and Currency Committee has decided on two things which are intended to send government 2 per cent. bonds back to par or over and to check any movement among banks to surrender federal charters and to become incorporated as State or private institutions. The committee has decided that no national bank may present for exchange for 5 per cent. bonds in any one year more than 5 per cent. of its holdings of 2 per cent. bonds at the time of the passage of the new law.

To prevent the too rapid redemption of the bonds by the government, the bill was changed so as to permit the use of surplus funds over the 5 per cent. dividends slowed central reserve bank stockholders for the retirement of any outstanding obligations of the government.

Will Not Fight New Tariff.

Republicans in Congress are not going to make a concerted fight against the passage of the administration tariff bill. There will not even be a minority report from members of that party who are on the Senate Finance Committee, and protests will be individual. The disposition on the part of Republicans is to let Democrats now that they have the power, to go as near free trade as they like. Republicans think the farther Democrats go, the more it will be to their political disadvantage.

"The feeling is," said Senator Penrose, "that any amendments we may offer will be defeated anyway. The Republican party cannot get control of the government until the next presidential election and the wise policy is to wait until that time to take up the tariff question afresh when new business conditions present themselves to be dealt with."

London Copper Quotations.

The resumption of metal buying abroad had some effect upon the London copper warrants market at the opening, spot being up 6s. 3d. and futures 5s.

The News Bureau prints a cablegram from London reading: "Copper consumers are now coming into the market, and there is a big demand from Germany and France. All producers have made good sales and are now asking £66 the equivalent of 14⅝ cents, for electrolytic."

Schumann-Heink's Son Loses by 'Joker'

NEW YORK, July 17.—Henry Schumann-Heink of Paterson, d son of Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, the opera singer, has been checked in his ambition to be official crier in the Passaic County Court. He stood at the head of the civil service list. It was discovered yesterday that the law of 1912, which placed the offer under civil service, provided that the incumbent, John F. Lee, should retain the job.

The Prime Minister and Gate Receipts

If Mr. William J. Bryan, with a salary of $12,000 as Secretary of State, can leave his great office for six weeks of Chautauqua lectures at from $300 to $1,000 a night, why should not Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo run over to New York every other day to keep intact his salary from the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Hudson Tubes?

Why should not Secretary of War Garrison continue his practise of law for fees at Trenton?

Why should not Secretary Foster continue to earn half his salary by bi-weekly lectures before the College at St. Louis? And why should not Secretary Josephus Daniels spend every other week in Raleigh looking after his income from the Observer?

Of course, the government's business is incidental and perfunctory, and anybody can be left to attend to that!

Mr. Bryan is by profession The Commoner. He is not given to lavish and expensive living. His family is small. He is comparatively a rich man. He has been for twenty years on the lecture platform. He charges the people from $300 to $1,000 to hear him talk, and he gets it. On some occasions his share of the "gate receipts" runs as high as $2,500 for a lecture. He always collects what his contract calls for. He is a very thrifty soul. His is a very profitable business.

Mr. Bryan's books have had a large sale. The Commoner must be a very profitable newspaper.

And yet Mr. Bryan, the Commoner, is the only member of the Cabinet who has protested that his salary of $12,000 is not enough to live on!

Mr. Bryan is the Prime Minister of the United States. It is a station of magnificent dignity and of magnificent responsibility. This is a period of grave and delicate international controversies. It is a time for every public servant to stay at his post and attend to the business for which the people pay him in large figures.

If Mr. Bryan feels that he has consented to serve the people of the United States in this lofty station at too great a sacrifice to his money-making capacity, then a generous people might suggest to a diligent President to promptly release Mr. Bryan and let him return to the arena where his inclinations and his thrift can be better satisfied.

If the call of the gate money is greater than the call of the Republic, then our always thrifty Commoner should not be restrained in his freeborn aspirations.

Mr. Bryan's diplomacy has already excited the derision of our own and other countries.

Mr. Bryan's incapacity has made it not only a pleasure, but a genuine privilege, for the President to excuse his absence from Washington in many important emergencies.

Mr. Bryan's absenteeism from his post has excited the indignation of the taxpayers and evoked an inquiry in Congress.

And Mr. Bryan's contempt for filthy lucre has already attained in public life to the same proportions as when, in private life, he tried to deprive the widow of his dead friend Bennett of her rightful inheritance!

What "a perfectly corking time" Mr. Bryan would have had as President!

It is difficult to understand just what and also just which Mr. Bryan is—Secretary of State, editor of The Commoner, or "the best seller at the Chautauqua!"

The policy of this paper is not against tariff reduction. It is in favor of trade extension. Its policy is the policy of reciprocity. We believe that reduction in the tariff may be a good thing, but it is quite as certainly true that an extension of our markets is a good thing, and that if we can get the extension of our markets while we are getting the reduction of our tariff, we will undoubtedly be doing a beneficial thing. AND THIS OUGHT TO BE SECURED BY RECIPROCITY.

The Lesson of the Lamar and Lauterbach Expose

The revelations concerning the methods of Lauterbach and Lamar at Washington only call to public attention a CONDITION which men acquainted with public affairs have KNOWN to EXIST FOR YEARS.

Many an HONEST man in public office has been made to seem like a CROOK by persons who pretended to represent them and who COLLECTED MONEY as their alleged agents from corporations or other interests concerned in legislation.

Several years ago Mr. Robert Luce declared in the House of Representatives that he had reason to believe that many times he had been BOUGHT and SOLD by gentlemen of the lobby without his knowledge. Every well-informed man who heard Mr. Luce or read his statement, knew, from his knowledge of the general practice, that Mr. Luce probably SPOKE THE TRUTH.

Senator Cummins proposes a federal law making this sort of thing a crime. It OUGHT to be a crime everywhere. It probably is a crime at common law.

The injury which such practices do is THREEFOLD. It GENERATES a FOUL ATMOSPHERE about our legislative assemblies which CORRUPTS the standards of everybody who passes into it. It WEAKENS one of the great SAFEGUARDS of HUMAN PROBITY, which is the consciousness that other men know and respect one's virtue. It BEGETS the BELIEF in men who have personal interests in legislation that all public men have been corrupted or are seeking to be corrupted, and thus it DEADENS their CONSCIENTIOUS SCRUPLES against using corruption in affecting legislation which concerns them.

THE PLAYROOM

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THIS was the playroom. It is empty now,
Save that the toys remain like tiny wraiths;
Sometimes we fancy that like us they bow
Before the blow that warps so many faiths.
We come here often in the hush of night
When we are numb and praying for the day,
Hoping like fools to hear the laughter light,
Made by the little boy that used to play.

He was so small, and yet he was so brave,
While marshalling his forces for the battle;
The painted troops obeyed each sign he gave
And shuddered when he struck them with his rattle.
We sob and almost hear them sobbing, too;
And why should not his painted troops feel sad?
He was the only chief they ever knew,
He was the only baby that we had.

THE MASTER BEGGAR

By Edith Rickert

Love may come limping, halt or blind,
Yes, he may wear the mask of sin;
Though he be brutal, rough, unkind—
Open the door and let him in.

He stands and laughs at the hands that deny,
He knows that for him there is no nay;
He knocks where he will, with low and high—
Enters and sets his staff away.

You may crowd your hall with many a guest,
To pipe and dance in his despite;
You may work and forget him, mock him with jest—
Patient he sits there, morn and night.

No alms may content him. Silent to wit
'Til he holds the keys of life—his part;
The beggar is master and keeps his state,
Alone by the fireside of the heart.

One Woman's Story

CHAPTER VII.

PERHAPS Mary Danforth did not acknowledge to herself why it was so hard for her to give her mind to her studies during the evening on which she received Craig's pansies. If she appreciated that the sender of the flowers was in her consciousness more than was the book of civics lying open in the glow of her student's lamp, she did not admit it even in her innermost thoughts. She tried to "concentrate," but her wits wandered, and time and again she found, with a guilty start, that for some minutes she had been gazing abstractedly at nothing. It was late when at last she put out her light, urged to this course by her mother, who insisted that she was wearing herself out studying so hard, and that she would be "good for nothing" in the morning.

When Mary awoke on the morrow she was forced to confess the accuracy of the final part of her mother's prediction, for she did feel "good for nothing." Her eyes smarted and her limbs ached as she busied herself with her toilette. A vague feeling of disappointment possessed her, depressing, and, at the same time, irritating her, and she went to breakfast with her nerves and temper on edge. She had difficulty in controlling her feelings when Mrs. Danforth, in her desire to promote table talk, innocently introduced the subject of Craig—feeling that he would be an interesting topic of conversation.

"I declare," announced the kind-hearted matron amiably, "I have almost fallen in love myself with that tall Texan. He has such beautiful manners and is so considerate of elderly people. Don't you think he is delightful?"

As this remark was addressed to the table at large, Mary, vexed at the blush which she felt creeping to her forehead, busied herself with her grapefruit and made no reply.

"Don't you like him, daughter?" persisted her mother.

"I think that he's a presentable man, mother, if that's what you mean," responded the girl tartly and with tightening lips. "You can hardly expect me to say, as you just said, that I am 'almost in love with him' myself, can you?"

The words were sharp and the tone harsh. The speaker suddenly appreciated that this was the second time within a few days that she had been impatient with her mother. As before, she regretted her show of temper when she saw the wounded expression in her mother's eyes. She noted also that her father was looking at her in amazement.

"I did not mean to speak like that, mother," she said quickly and penitently. She pushed her chair back from the table and, going around to the elderly woman, laid her own flushed cheek against the wrinkled one. "I had no business to be so cross, and I am very sorry. I am as nervous as a cat this morning. Please forgive me."

Mrs. Danforth patted her daughter's hand, her face all smiles in an instant.

"That's all right, my darling," she soothed. "We all have our cranky spells. Now eat your breakfast, for it is getting late. I shall be glad when this dreadful grind is over and you have graduated," she added, with a sigh. "You are not like your dear self these days, and it is because you are overwrought and overtired."

Mary made no protest. She wondered secretly if the strain of work was entirely responsible for her vague sense of discontent and uncertainty. Breakfast over, she hurried to her room to collect her books, and, as she returned to the hall, ready to leave the house, she came upon her father. He was leaning against the wall, his hand to his head. His face was pale and and his brow contracted as if he were suffering.

"Father!" exclaimed the girl in alarm, "what is the matter?"

He looked at her dazedly for an instant. Then he stood up straight and tried to laugh.

"Nothing to worry about, pet," he insisted. "I was just a little dizzy and headachey for a minute. I'm better now. Don't look so frightened!"

"Dad," said Mary, anxiously, "you're not well. You've been overworking."

"Oh, I guess not," he replied with an attempt at raillery. "An old codger like me must expect such feelings this warm weather, that's all—but I find it hard to remember that I'm getting old."

"Won't you see a doctor?" urged Mary.

"Pshaw!" he laughed. "I'm all right. I tell you! Don't mention this little turn to your mother, for she makes a mountain of a molehill when I don't feel up to the scratch."

On the way to school Mary thought of her father with some perturbation, but the hurry and bustle of the day's work drove all other worries from her brain, and she had forgotten the little episode by the time she boarded the subway train in the evening. She watched the express on which she rode draw away from a local train. As the lighted windows slid slowly backward she thought of how she had first seen Gordon Craig under circumstances like these. It was like a story-book romance, and he looked not unlike a book hero, she said to herself with a contemptuous smile at her own silliness.

Her thoughts were still busy with him as she walked along toward her home. When she turned into her own street several leather-lunged men carrying bundles of papers were shouting "extra" at the other end of the block in the hollow, reverberating tones of the New York disaster harbinger. Still dreaming, she paid little heed to them, but went up to her apartment, her mind on the man she had known for such a little while. Strange, she mused, that he should have impressed her so strongly. Her father was standing in the drawing room as she entered her home. A glance at his face brought her to a comprehension of the news vendors' cries as they were borne now to her ears through the open windows.

"Terrible accident on the Boston Express!" they were shouting.

Blindly the girl stretched her hands to her father as he came toward her.

"Dad," she asked hoarsely, "was that"——

She got no further, for her father put his arm quickly about her and drew her to him.

"Yes, little girl," he said tremulously, "the Boston express—Craig's train—has been wrecked, and, God help us! most of the Pullman passengers are dead."

INCREDIBLE, BUT TRUE

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

You are entitled to great praise, referring to the brutal treatment of the O'Neil children at Somerville. It seems incredible that any agent of the society, or any policeman, could have a hand in such scandalous work, the humiliation of innocent children upon any pretext whatsoever. Such work is shameful to the city and the State, and it is to be hoped that through the efforts of the AMERICAN the practice of such abuse will cease. CHARLES E. PAGE, M. D.
